Dear [redacted]

STAT

During the past month informal discussions have been held with [redacted] of your staff and Mr. John E. Taylor of the National Archives concerning a recent proposal made by the Chief, Resources Management Group, Assistant Chief of Staff, Intelligence, Department of the Air Force, that control of records of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey now held by the National Archives, be transferred from the Central Intelligence Agency to the Defense Intelligence Agency.

STAT

It is my understanding that [redacted] informal discussions with interested key officials of your Agency failed to surface any opposition to such a transfer.

STAT

Mr. Taylor has advised [redacted] and me that the National Archives would not interpose any objection to this transfer.

STAT

Accordingly, the proposed transfer agreement is forwarded for formal approval. Please retain a copy for your records and return the remainder.

The cooperation of both you and [redacted] is deeply appreciated.

STAT

Sincerely yours,

STAT

TRANSFER AGREEMENT
RECORDS OF THE UNITED STATES
STRATEGIC BOMBING SURVEY

1. The Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Intelligence Agency agree that overall responsibility for the proper security of all files of the United States Strategic Bombing Survey shall be transferred from the Central Intelligence Agency to the Defense Intelligence Agency, effective 15 August 1966.
2. It is further agreed that in assuming overall responsibility for the proper security of these records, DIA becomes responsible for any reclassification actions and for authorization of access to records containing classified defense information.
3. Physical custody of the complete files of the Survey, including published reports and background and supporting data for these reports, now deposited with the National Archives in Washington, D. C. 20405, will continue to be vested in the National Archives.
